

International Law:

What is a State?

The Government should exercise the executive power over the entire territory.

The Government must exercise the highest authority in the territory.

Recognized by other states.

The organization of the state must be developed to a such a degree that the state can maintain diplomatic relations with other states.

The International Law doesn't take the nature of the government into consideration. Democracy is not a condition.

